

These are unique, challenging, and unprecedented times for all of us. Like you, we are working hard to meet the needs of patients while prioritizing safety for our doctors and associates; and like you, we are developing strategies to make it through this storm and be prepared to emerge when it is safe to do so.

As a leader in eyecare, we believe we have a responsibility to utilize our network and financial resources to help elevate the profile of optometry within our healthcare system, and even more so in these challenging times. To that end, we are actively working with the AOA, government officials, and our financial partners at Goldman Sachs to work towards solutions that will hopefully benefit our entire profession. Additionally, our team at MyEyeDr interacts with thousands of optometrists across the country on a regular basis and we are available to discuss current industry insights, answer questions, or challenges that you may be facing or believe you will be facing once the current situation concludes. Please view us as a resource and friend during these trying times.

If we can be of any assistance to you and your team please do not hesitate to reach out to me at mguelcher@myeyedr.com or on my cell number below.

All the best to you, your family, and your community.

Mike

Mike Guelcher, MBA
Director of Practice Transitions
(cell) 803.412.1172
(fax) 571-223-7992 | www.capitalvisionservices.com